

Prof Erica Wood

Transfusion Research Unit

We are an internationally recognised, multidisciplinary research team working in transfusion and blood disorders.

Blood is a precious resource donated by volunteers. Blood transfusions save lives, but carry risks and costs, and need to be used wisely.

We lead national and international registries, clinical trials, systematic reviews, and other activities to inform health policy and practice. Our research contributes to better stewardship of national blood supplies and improved outcomes for patients with blood cancers, bone marrow failure, and others who require major transfusion support.
