The Monash Engineering Leadership Program is a three-year program that prepares students to be leaders in their chosen engineering fields. This internationally recognised program is delivered by industry experts and focuses on all aspects of leadership.

Student intake occurs once a year through an open call for applications. Selection through this process is interview based.

The program is designed to challenge, develop and engage students to help them become confident, articulate and ready to work in the industry.

The journey commences with an intensive three-day induction, which provide the foundations of the program. The following 12 modules focus on further building students’ knowledge and experience in the following areas:

- Understanding Self & Others
- Communication Skills
- Leading Teams
- Critical Decision Making
- Negotiation Skills
- Leadership in Action
- Ethics
- Project Management
- Sustainability
- Innovation & Entrepreneurship
- Globalisation
- Change Management

The program also offers career planning and industry visits to give students insight into the engineering world and help them connect with people in the industry.

Scholarships are offered to students who participate in the program. These scholarships are provided by our Industry Partners and Philanthropic Donors, and are available through a competitive application/interview based process. Scholarships help students form strong industry connections and offer various benefits to students, including the ability to meet engineering companies, potential industry mentorship and financial benefits.

At the conclusion of the program, students, Monash VIP’s, Heads of Department, Engineering Foundation Board members and industry representatives attend a graduation dinner to celebrate the students success and recognise industry partners and personal donors.
