12th Pharmacology of GPCRs & MPGPCR Joint Satellite Meeting

The Pharmacology of GPCRs & MPGPCR Joint Satellite Meeting

2026 will see the 12th iteration of the Pharmacology of GPCRs meeting (formally known as the Adrenoceptor satellite meeting) and the 12th Molecular Pharmacology of GPCRs (MPGPCR) meeting. This joint satellite meeting to the World Congress of Pharmacology 2026, covers recent developments in the field, with key presentations from leading researchers from around the world. This is a focused and intimate meeting, emphasising novel concepts in GPCR pharmacology and drug discovery. The meeting provides a relaxed interface between students, postdoctoral fellows, academic and industrial scientists from around the globe that encourages interaction, collaboration and debate on the latest research in the field.

Why participate?

- Network directly with professionals (those of the future (students)).
- Increase corporate, brand or product awareness
- Showcase your services or products in a relaxed atmosphere.

Who is attending?

This meeting will bring together leading national and international researchers in the fields of:

- GPCR cell signalling
- GPCR structural biology
- Molecular pharmacology
- Translational science
- Drug discovery
- Chemical biology

Meeting venue: 750 Collins Street, Monash University

Situated in Melbourne's vibrant Docklands precinct, 750 Collins Street is a Monash University venue that combines contemporary design with state-of-the-art facilities. 750 Collins Street is conveniently located in the heart of Melbourne within walking distance of the CBD and easily accessible by train, tram, or bus.
