Polycystic Ovary Syndrome (PCOS)

QUESTION PROMPT LIST

This question prompt list (QPL) is for women with PCOS. These are all questions that are OK to ask your doctor or health professional. You may have been diagnosed recently or a long time ago. It is for women of all ages, weights and backgrounds.

You can use this QPL to ask a few questions that are important to you now. You don't have to ask the questions exactly the way they are written here, you can adapt them. Some of the questions may not apply to you as PCOS affects different women in different ways.

PCOS QPL Version 4

This Polycystic Ovary Syndrome (PCOS) Question Prompt List is protected by copyright. It is made available for unlimited, free, worldwide personal use only by women who have or may have PCOS, and by their healthcare providers, and may only be reproduced in a printed publication or online with the consent of the Monash Centre for Health Research and Implementation (MCHRI) and with this notice intact.

The PCOS Question Prompt List is intended to help you obtain professional medical advice. It does not constitute and is not a substitute for professional medical advice and should be used only in connection with a discussion with a doctor or other healthcare professional. MCHRI should not be taken to endorse or recommend any test, treatment or medication by reason of it being referred to in the PCOS Question Prompt List. Do not disregard professional medical advice or delay seeking it because of something you have read in the PCOS Question Prompt List.

How do I use the QPL?

- 1 The following websites have general information about PCOS. We suggest you look at one or more of these sites first. Then think about the questions that are most important to you right now. Also, if you read something on the internet that you don't understand then you can ask your doctor about it.

- 2 There still needs to be time for your doctor or health professional to do any physical checks, ask questions also, and talk with you about the management plan that's best for you. So even if you have lots of questions, try 1-3 to start with. Talk with your doctor about other options for having your questions answered. Sometimes you can book a longer appointment or you can see someone else at the clinic like the practice nurse. Your doctor might give you a referral to a different type of health professional (like a dietitian or a PCOS specialist) depending on your questions.
- 3 Keep your QPL with your other health documents. Look at it before any PCOS-related appointment. Different questions might be important to you at different times, so you can use the QPL again and again. You might want to give a copy of your QPL to your health professional to keep in your record too.
