1. INTRODUCTORY AND FORMAL BUSINESSACTION

- 1.1. Death of Professor A. J. Marshall Council asked that the following minute be recorded concerning the death of Professor A. J. Marshall on 20th July 1967, -

The Council records its sincere regret at the death of A. J. Marshall, D.Sc., D.Phil., Foundation Professor of Zoology and Comparative Physiology at this University; one of its original members and the second Professor to be appointed.

Professor Marshall established a Department of acknowledged excellence throughout the academic world. His influence on the University was wide and beneficial, especially through his support for standards of the highest order in research and scholarship. The degree of his inspiration to staff and to students, both undergraduate and graduate, will profoundly influence biological research and teaching in this University for many years to come.

The Council wishes to convey its deepest sympathy to his wife and family.
