Focus areas
Our vision is to be a global, modern top-ranked library

We will be regarded as a global leader among academic libraries. Our content, collections, facilities, services and culture will represent best practice and collectively make a significant contribution to the University’s reputation and impact.

We will continually evaluate what we do in relation to the University’s fundamental goals of being excellent, international, enterprising and inclusive. We will be able to benchmark ourselves favourably against exemplars of innovation and excellence elsewhere in the world.

The Monash University Library of 2025, both physical and digital, will be much more accessible, and our services and resources much better integrated into the activities and workflows of students and staff. Internal Library operations will have been automated and streamlined, allowing staffing resources to be redirected to the development and delivery of higher-value services for the University. The Library will provide campus and sector leadership in areas in which it has unique expertise and interest, such as open access and copyright.

While we will work to ensure that our users’ experiences with the Library are productive, useful, efficient and rewarding, we will aspire to delight by exceeding their expectations.

In the next five years, we will build on the efforts of current and past staff who have ensured that the Library is a well-resourced, well-regarded part of the University and academic library sector. To achieve our vision, we will have areas of strategic focus and we will develop programs of work for each area. We will continue to be deeply engaged with the Monash community, working in partnership with academic and professional colleagues to achieve strong outcomes for the University.
