

References

Byrnes, M. (2013). Employees' dismissal for emailing porn found unfair. Law Society Journal, 51(9), 48 - 49.

Retrieved from <https://www.lawsociety.com.au/>

DePree, C. M., & Jude, R. K., (2006). Who's reading your office e-mail? Is that legal? Strategic Finance, 87(10),

45-47. Retrieved from <http://sfmagazine.com/>

Fenely, R. (2014, October 25). Poetry professor tests line between satire and bigotry. The Sydney Morning

Herald. p. 29. Retrieved from <http://www.smh.com.au/>

Gilbert, J. (2012). Ethics for managers: Philosophical foundations and business realities. New York: Routledge.

Kiser, I. T., Porter, T., & Vequist, D. (2010). Employee monitoring and ethics: can they co-exist? International Journal of Digital Literacy and Digital Competence, 1(4), 30-45. doi:10.4018/jdlc.2010100104

McNeilage, A. (2014, October 18). Professor suspended from uni after racist emails leak source. The Sydney

Morning Herald. p. 4. Retrieved from <http://www.smh.com.au/>

O'Rourke, A., Teicher, J., & Pyman, A. (2011). Internet and email monitoring in the workplace: time for an alternate approach. Journal of Industrial Relations, 53(4), 522-533. doi:10.1177/0022185611414622.

Robbins, S. P., Bergman, R., Stagg, I., & Coulter, M. (2012). Management (6th ed.). Frenchs Forest, NSW:

Pearson Education Australia.

Van Gramberg, B., Teicher, J., & O'Rourke, A. (2014). Managing electronic communications: A new challenge for human resource managers. The International Journal of Human Resource Management, 25(16), 2234-

2252. doi:10.1080/09585192.2013.872166

Wheelwright, K. (2002). Monitoring employees' email and internet use at work - balancing the interests of employers and employees. Journal of Law and Information Science, 13, 70-89.