

Sustainability in business and economics

A two-day workshop on sustainability in Prato, Italy 22-23 June, 2015

Monash Business School will be hosting a two-day workshop on Sustainability at the Monash University Prato Centre (near Florence, Italy) on 22-23 June 2015.

The goal of this workshop is to make research connections, strengthen existing ties, and stimulate new ideas.

The workshop will have two streams, one focused on economics and the other on business, with some overlap to explore potential areas of synergy between the two groups. The economics sessions will cover a broad spectrum of themes on environment, resources, and sustainability economics whilst the business sessions will cover topics relating to transforming business practice for sustainability.

The workshop will bring together a core group of Monash staff and a select group of researchers from North America and Europe with expertise and interests in similar topics.

Papers in the economics stream will cover topics such as modeling and experimental approaches in the areas of resource management, environmental regulation, and food security.

Papers in the business stream will cover topics such as sustainable operations and supply chains, sustainable agriculture, social business and sustainable development.

The overall aim of this workshop is to explore potential for mutually beneficial research collaboration to deepen existing research relationships and forge new links.

For more information please contact:

Professor Michael Ward
Economics stream
E: Michael.Ward@monash.edu

Professor Amrik Sohal
Business stream
E: Amrik.Sohal@monash.edu
