

RightsTalk

RightsTalk: Rights in a Crowded Classroom

Date: Wednesday 11 March

Time: 6:00pm - 7:30pm

Venue: Monash Conference Centre, Level 7,
30 Collins Street, Melbourne, VIC, 3000

With the national curriculum once again in focus, it's timely to reflect on the place of human rights in education. Is it the role of schools to teach issues like race relations and disability rights? If so, how? And how can schools engage with human rights and diversity beyond the curriculum?

Join our panellists:

 Kate Jenkins, Commissioner, Victorian Equal Opportunity and Human Rights	 Dr. Libby Tudball, Director Undergraduate Programs, Faculty of Education, Monash University
 Tim Soutphommasane, Race Discrimination Commissioner, Australia Human Rights Commission	 Chris Thompson, Director, Priority Cohorts Branch, Department of Education and Training

Moderator: Associate Professor Paula Gerber, Deputy Director Castan Centre for Human Rights, Monash University.

The Commission will also be launching its range of new schools education resources on disability, race relations and human rights for maths, geography, history and health/physical education at this event.

RightsTalk RSVP: <https://crowdedclassroomvic.eventbrite.com.au>

The venue is wheelchair accessible. If you have any requirements that will assist in your full participation please contact events@humanrights.gov.au

Info: events@humanrights.gov.au or www.humanrights.gov.au/get-involved/rightstalk.

The views expressed in these sessions are those of the presenter and do not necessarily represent the view of the Australian Human Rights Commission.