ACKNOWLEDGEMENT OF COUNTRY

Monash University recognises that its Australian campuses are located on the unceded lands of the people of the Kulin Nations, and pays its respects to their Elders, past and present.

Welcome

The Annual Castan Centre for Human Rights Law Conference is an excellent opportunity for practitioners and students to deepen their understanding of human rights, and connect with fellow lawyers, advocates, public officials, scholars, and activists.

For over 25 years, the Castan Centre for Human Rights Law has contributed to legal reform and helped bring human rights law into public conversation. Today, we continue to engage with emerging human rights challenges in Australia and around the world, training the next generation of human rights lawyers, policymakers and advocates, and working to ensure that human rights remain central to law, policy and public debate. Since 2001, our Conference has been Australia's leading annual human rights law event, and an important annual meeting place for those committed to advancing the protection of human rights.

Recently, our research has informed submissions on racism and vilification, judicial independence, surrogacy law reform, and disability discrimination, with further contributions underway to parliamentary and international inquiries, including anti-LGBTIQA+ hate crimes, the rights of Indigenous peoples, and racism, hate and violence directed at Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people.

The Castan Centre is embarking on a new research and advocacy project focused on Victoria's Treaty processes. As an initial step, we recorded a webinar titled Understanding Victoria's Statewide Treaty Bill that was attended by over 400 people.

Our Human Rights Clinic supported public housing residents facing displacement, while our PhD students and researchers continue to earn national recognition for excellence and impact. We extend our sincere thanks to Professor Melissa Castan for her outstanding leadership of the Castan Centre (2021-2026) and congratulate her on being among the first cohort to receive the title of Vice-Chancellor's Distinguished Professor at Monash University.

We are delighted to welcome you to The Annual Castan Centre for Human Rights Law Conference and hope you enjoy a day of thoughtful discussion and meaningful engagement across some of the most critical issues in human rights law.

Leading the Next Chapter in Human Rights

“It is such an honour to be trusted to lead the Castan Centre and to continue its tradition of rigorous scholarship, meaningful engagement and commitment to advancing human rights. I am excited about reinforcing and enhancing the Castan Centre’s position as Australia’s leading academic human rights centre.”

Associate Professor Ronli Sifris Director, Castan Centre for Human Rights Law

Ronli Sifris is an internationally recognised scholar who has expertise in health law and human rights law, gender and human rights, and matters that engage all three of these areas.

She returns to Monash following work at the Australian Law Reform Commission, where she has been serving as Assistant Commissioner leading the review of Australia’s surrogacy laws. Her leadership of the review comes after more than a decade of research in surrogacy, reproductive rights and the intersection of law and lived experience. It has also offered her the opportunity to contribute directly to law reform at a federal level.

Connecting research, law reform and real-world impact, Ronli is the author of multiple books, including Towards Reproductive Justice (2024). She has contributed book chapters to major international handbooks, and has published around 30 peer reviewed journal articles in leading publications. Her research has been cited by the High Court of Australia and the UK Supreme Court, reflecting the authority of her work in shaping human rights discourse.

National Commissioner for Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Children and Young People

Keynote address

Sue-Anne Hunter is the inaugural National Commissioner for Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Children and Young People, and a Wurundjeri and Ngurai Illum Wurrung woman. She is known for her work as Deputy Chair and Commissioner in Victoria's Yoorrook Justice Commission, Australia's first formal First Peoples truth-telling inquiry. Sue-Anne is also a member of the National Centre for Reconciliation, Truth, and Justice Advisory Board, an Adjunct Professor of Global Engagement at Federation University and a PhD candidate at Monash University.

With a background in child and family services practice, Sue-Anne has over two decades' clinical experience responding to developmental, transgenerational and community trauma. She is widely recognised for developing rights-based, transformative practice responses that empower Aboriginal people to heal from the continuing effects and processes of colonisation.

20th Anniversary of the Victorian Charter of Human Rights and Responsibilities

The Victorian Charter: A Celebration of 20 years of Human Rights Protections in Victoria

This session will focus on the Charter of Human Rights and Responsibilities Act 2006 (Vic) (Charter) to mark its 20th anniversary. Speakers will explore the strengths and achievements of the Charter in its first 20 years, and may canvass its limitations and priorities for reform.

Each speaker has extensive knowledge of, and experience engaging with, the Charter – whether as statutory authorities with responsibilities under the Charter itself, as for the VEOHRC and the Victorian Ombudsman Office, or as the leading law centre engaging with the Charter, as for HRLC.

The insights of our speakers regarding the first 20 years will help navigate the next 20 years of human rights protection in Victoria.

Speakers

Dr Farinaz Zamani

Victorian Equal Opportunity and Human Rights Commission

Farinaz Zamani is the Manager of the Human Rights Education team at the Victorian Equal Opportunity and Human Rights Commission (VEOHRC), where she leads the Charter Education Program. The program works with Victorian government departments and agencies to build capability in understanding and applying the Charter of Human Rights and Responsibilities Act 2006 (Vic) and to strengthen a culture of human rights across the public sector. Farinaz is a solicitor with experience across government, academia and the private legal sector. She holds a Master of Laws in Human Rights from University College London (UCL) and a PhD in Human Rights Law from Monash University, with both qualifications specialising in human rights law. In addition to her work at VEOHRC, she is a lecturer at Monash Law, where she teaches Criminal Law and International Human Rights Law. Born in Iran and now based in Melbourne, Farinaz's experiences growing up in Iran and migrating to Australia have shaped her longstanding commitment to human rights, equality and social justice. Farinaz is a recipient of a 2025 Churchill Fellowship and will travel to Canada, South Africa, Switzerland, France, Finland and Norway in late 2026 to examine how governments build human rights capability and embed human rights into public sector decision-making, with the aim of strengthening human rights practice across Australia.

Dan Nicholson Victorian Ombudsman's Office

Dan Nicholson is the Deputy Victorian Ombudsman Operations, responsible for the VO's complaints, investigations and legal divisions. Dan worked with VLA from 2012 to 2024 in a range of roles, including as the Executive Director, Criminal Law and Executive Director, Civil Justice, Access and Equity.

Dan previously managed the Human Rights Unit at the Victorian Department of Justice, was Associate to Justice Maxwell, President of the Court of Appeal and worked at Fitzroy Legal Service. He has worked on a range of human rights issues in Cambodia and Timor-Leste. Dan was a Director of the Sentencing Advisory Council from 2021 to 2024 and has been a Commissioner of the Victorian Law Reform Commission since 2018.

Caitlin Reiger Human Rights Law Centre

Caitlin Reiger is CEO of the Human Rights Law Centre and a human rights lawyer. She has spent the past 25 years working globally on transitional justice for mass human rights violations, international criminal law, and justice system reform. Since returning to Australia, Caitlin supported the First Peoples' Assembly of Victoria in the design and establishment of the Yoorrook Justice Commission. Caitlin's work has included the interplay between truth-telling, reparations, criminal justice and institutional reform efforts, including in Timor Leste, Sierra Leone, Cambodia and Colombia. She headed the European Union's flagship access to justice programme in Myanmar, MyJustice, which used arts, culture and social media platforms to improve public awareness of fundamental rights, and supported recognition of traditional/informal justice systems as part of peace negotiations.

Professor Julie Debeljak (Chair) Monash University

Julie Debeljak's career at Monash University spans nearly three decades, grounded in a sustained commitment to human rights scholarship and practice. Currently Associate Dean for Equity, Diversity and Inclusion, and Deputy Director of the Castan Centre for Human Rights Law, her work has shaped conversations around international, national and comparative human rights law, constitutional law, and public law. Her research primarily explores how human rights obligations are implemented domestically, including through instruments such as the Victorian Charter of Human Rights and Responsibilities. She has contributed extensively to scholarship on issues ranging from trafficking in persons to human rights in closed environments, to the rights scrutiny obligations of governments and parliaments in policy and law making, alongside authoring books, chapters, and policy submissions. Her leadership also extends beyond academia. Julie has been closely involved in human rights capacity-building across government, the judiciary, and the broader community.

The Experience of Australian Judges on International Courts

A panel on the opportunities, constraints, and ethical terrain of international judicial service for Australian judges.

Justice Without Borders – and Its Limits

When Australian judges step onto international benches, they bring the values and traditions of Australia’s legal system and human rights framework. But international judicial service is not without its tensions.

What obligations does an Australian judge carry beyond their own jurisdiction?

What frameworks govern their conduct when the institutional cultures, political pressures, or procedural norms they encounter are radically different?

This panel interrogates the considerations, ethical responsibilities, and limits on Australian judges who accept appointments on international judicial bodies.

Speakers

The Hon. Lex Lasry AM KC

Acting Justice, Supreme Court of the Northern Territory

Lex Lasry is a highly experienced Australian barrister and judge with a long career in criminal law. Admitted in Victoria in 1973, he practised at the Victorian Bar, appeared in major criminal trials and appeals, and served as counsel in significant royal commissions, inquests, and high-profile cases.

He was appointed Queen’s Counsel in 1990 and later became a judge of the Supreme Court of Victoria in 2007, where he served in the Criminal Division and as Principal Judge before retiring in 2018.

He continued in acting judicial roles until 2026, including with the Supreme Court of the Northern Territory, and now co-hosts “Law the Podcast” with Greg Barns SC.

Kevin Yam
Former Hong Kong Lawyer

Kevin Yam is currently a PhD Candidate and Part-Time Lecturer at Melbourne Law School. He spent nearly two decades in Hong Kong as a solicitor, with over eight years of which as a partner at an international law firm, specialising in financial regulatory and white collar crime defence as well as large-scale commercial litigation. Kevin has also been and continues to be a Hong Kong democracy and rule of law activist, which resulted in the Hong Kong Government placing a bounty over his head in 2023. He was subsequently disbarred as a Hong Kong solicitor, which led to statements in his support from legal bodies including the Law Council of Australia, the Law Society of England and Wales, the Bar Human Rights Committee of England and Wales, the Council of Bars and Law Societies of Europe, the International Bar Association's Human Rights Institute, Lawyers for Lawyers, The Rights Practice, the Asian Lawyers Network and Lawyers' Rights Watch Canada.

Associate Professor Rebecca Ananian-Welsh
University of Queensland

Rebecca Ananian-Welsh is an Associate Professor of public law at the University of Queensland where her teaching and research focus on courts, security and democracy. In addition to scholarly work, Rebecca provides regular submissions and evidence to public inquiries and has served on: the Australian Association of Constitutional Law National Council, the Australian Judicial Officers' Association Standing Committee on Judicial Independence, the Law Council of Australia National Security Law Working Group, and the Centre for Public Integrity. Rebecca's research has been cited by the High Court of Australia, recognised in awards from Australian Academy of Social Sciences and UQ, and shortlisted for an Australian Legal Research Award and a Queensland Literary Award. Before commencing her academic career, Rebecca held positions with DLA Piper Sydney and the Commonwealth Attorney-General's Department.

Sara Kowal (Chair)
Director of Eleos Justice, Monash University

Sara Kowal is Director of Eleos Justice, Monash Law as well as Vice-President of the Capital Punishment Justice Project. She has practised exclusively in criminal law since 2003 and has extensive experience in defending complex prosecutions.

In 2018, Sara was appointed to establish the Eleos Anti-Death Penalty Clinic at Monash. In November 2019, Sara joined the Executive of the Anti-Death Penalty Asia Network (ADPAN) and is currently the Deputy Co-Convenor.

She sits on a number of working groups of the World Coalition Against the Death Penalty (WCADP). Sara also sits on the Advisory Board of the Australians Against Wrongful and Arbitrary Detention Alliance (AWAADA).

Emerging Treaty Law in Victoria

A panel on the legal architecture, opportunities, and challenges emerging from Victoria's statewide treaty process.

Victoria's commitment to a treaty framework marks a significant moment in Australian public law and human rights law, reshaping the relationship between the state and First Peoples.

The treaty process raises foundational questions about proper legal relations, legal authority, and the recognition of Indigenous rights within existing constitutional structures. What does it mean to negotiate treaties within the Victorian legal system?

How do public law principles adapt to accommodate self-determination and Indigenous governance?

This panel examines the frameworks underpinning Victoria's treaty process, the institutions established to support negotiation, and the legal questions that follow. It explores the intersections between public law doctrine and Indigenous rights, including issues of representation, legitimacy, and enforceability.

Bringing together perspectives on law, policy, and practice, the discussion will consider both the transformative potential and the structural limits of treaty-making at the state level

Speakers

The Hon. Kenneth Hayne AC KC

Kenneth Hayne joined the bench in 1992 when he was appointed as a judge of the Supreme Court of Victoria. From 7 June 1995 he sat on the Court of Appeal of the Supreme Court of Victoria, which is the highest court in the Australian State of Victoria. Kenneth was appointed as a Justice of the High Court in September 1997.

Kenneth received Australia's highest civil honour when he was appointed a Companion of the Order of Australia (AC) in 2002 for service to the judiciary, to the law as an outstanding scholar, barrister and jurist, and to the community in the advancement of both legal and general education.

Bridgid Cowling Special Counsel, Gellung Warl

Bridgid Cowling joined Gellung Warl in December 2025 from law firm Arnold Bloch Leibler where she was special counsel in the native title and public interest team. Bridgid's early career was in native title and land rights at the Northern Land Council and Cape York Land Council. While continuing this practice focus, she has developed expertise in charity law and governance and is a recognised expert in that area.

Bridgid is a member of the Law Council of Australia's Charities and Not-for-profits Committee and the Chairty Law Association of Australia and New Zealand through which she contributes to law reform efforts and legal education. Bridgid is also a director of the environmental charity Country Needs People.

Karri Walker
Principal Lawyer - Treaty, Gellung Warl

Karri Walker is a proud Nyiyaparli woman whose family is from the East Pilbara region of Western Australia and has grown up living on Wurundjeri Country. She is the Senior Lawyer at Gellung Warl working on securing ground-breaking reform through the nation's first Treaty process. Prior to joining Gellung Warl, Karri worked as a commercial lawyer at Arnold Bloch Leibler. She is deeply committed to justice and self-determination and sits on the Board of Fitzroy Legal Service and the Advisory Council of the Indigenous Law and Justice Hub at Melbourne Law School. As a John Monash Scholar, Karri will pursue a Master of Laws at Harvard University to explore how the law can be used to empower disadvantaged communities and how this could be deployed in Australia. Her goal is to pursue structural reform which gives First Peoples the power and authority to make decisions on issues that affect the First Peoples community.

Professor Melissa Castan (Chair)
Vice-Chancellor's Distinguished Professor, Monash University

Melissa Castan is the former Director of the Castan Centre for Human Rights Law. She has over 25 years experience teaching, researching and publishing in Australian Public Law, Constitutional law, Human Rights Law, Indigenous Legal Issues, and Legal Education. Melissa's most recent book is Time to Listen: an Indigenous Voice to Parliament, co-authored with Distinguished Professor Lynette Russell AM. Melissa is National Convenor of the Alternative Law Journal, a Board Member of the Victorian Law Foundation since 2015, and has hosted legal interest podcasts 'Law Radio' and 'Just Cases'. Her newest podcast is 'Case in Point'. Melissa has previously held a number of leadership roles in the Faculty of Law, as Associate Dean (Staffing) 2020-2023, Associate Dean (Education) 2019, and Member of Academic Board 2020-2023. In 2026, Professor Melissa Castan became one of Monash University's inaugural Vice-Chancellor's Distinguished Professors.

The Monash Master of Laws (LLM) offers the specialisation pathways you need to make a tangible impact.

True progress requires sophisticated legal expertise.

If you are passionate about driving systemic change, defending human rights, or navigating complex international frameworks, the Global Society and Human Rights specialisation equips you with theoretical and practical knowledge in the laws governing human and civil rights.

It aims to expand your expertise, and gives you the opportunity to pursue emerging areas of study or explore existing knowledge at a deeper level.

- Study advanced modules in Human Rights, International Law, and Governance.
- Connect with the world-renowned Castan Centre for Human Rights Law and legal experts.
- Flexible study options to suit practicing professionals.

Suitable for graduates interested in developing or enhancing a career in the government or development sectors, or in a human rights-focused organisation.

The LLM also suits law graduates interested in developing or enhancing a specialist career as a human rights lawyer.

Castan Centre Human Rights Clinic

The Castan Centre Human Rights Clinic offers Monash law students with an interest in human rights the opportunity to conduct policy and advocacy work on behalf of a client organisation with support and guidance from Castan Centre staff.

The Clinic provides an opportunity for students to conduct research with real impact on the work of the organisations involved and gives students professional experience in the human rights field. It forms part of the 6 credit unit LAW4811 ('In-House Placement') and will run once a week each semester for a period of 12 weeks. 2026 applications close 20 July.

Your support matters

The Castan Centre was founded in memory of Ron Castan AM QC, whose work on the Mabo case helped achieve recognition of native title in Australian law.

The landmark High Court case - one of the most significant decisions in our nation's legal history - transformed Australian law by recognising native title, and is a powerful reminder of how human rights advocacy by ordinary people can create extraordinary change.

We're proud to be named in Ron's honour and to continue this legacy through our work in research, education and advocacy.

The Castan Centre raises most of its income outside Monash University, and continuing this work is sustained in large part through the support of our community of human rights champions.

This year, we're aiming to raise AUD$55,000 in our annual appeal to fund our research and activities.

If you believe in the importance of human rights, please consider donating to the Castan Centre, via our website or by using the QR code. Donations of $2 or more are tax-deductible and all funds raised go directly to the Castan Centre's important work.
